NOTES

- 1) This list has been compiled from several sources and it is possible that some non-Italian names may have crept in by mistake.
- 2) Many female names are derivatives of male names (e.g. Dario/Daria, Claudio/Claudia,) and have mostly been excluded.
- 3) Surnames and words with equivalent function:
 - The place of birth could follow the name after the preposition "di/dà". For example Raimondo di Guardea means Raimondo of Guardea.
 - If using an adjective then this would be preceded by "il/la" depending on the gender. For example Vittorio il Famoso (Vittorio the Famous), Agostina la Magnifica (Agostina the Magnificent). Of course you'll need a dictionary for the adjectives...
- 4) The letters "ci/cè" should be pronounced like the English "ch", whilst "c" followed by any other vowel is a hard "k" sound (i.e. like coffee). Note: "chi/che" are also pronounced "k". The letters "gi/ge" have a soft "j" like in jacket. "g" followed by any other vowel is a hard g sound (i.e. like garden). The letter "z" is pronounced as either tz or dz. "zz" tends to have the tz sound. In Italian there is no equivalent to the "ph" sound, and so words are spelt with ff (i.e. Raffaello).
- 5) It is possible for two forenames to be combined to make one name. For example, Pierluigi.
- 6) Titles are as follows:
 - Signore* = Mr., sir
 - Signora* = Mrs., madam

Signorina = Miss., young lady

Some nobility titles:

Scudiero/Cavaliere = Squire/Knight

Gentiluomo = Gentle

Barone/Baronessa = Baron/Baroness

Conte/Contessa = Count/Countess

Duca/Duchessa = Duke/Duchess

Re/Regina = King/Queen

7) Male names marked with an * are names whose feminine form can be obtained by substituting the final letter with an "a". For female names replace the last with "o" to obtain the masculine.

8) Unlike in German or English the name Andrea in Italian is male. Now, this can lead to some funny roleplaying situations when such a character will arrive to the Empire. ;-)
